These terms and conditions shall apply to all offers, proposals and agreements made between Elsevier and any third party (the “Client”) relating to the products and/or services of Elsevier (the “Products and/or Services”) and, along with the relevant Elsevier order acknowledgement shall, for all purposes, constitute the entire agreement between the parties (the “TC”). 3. Liability and claims

Subject to the liabilities and limitations specified elsewhere in the TC, Elsevier shall not be liable to the Client for any indirect, special, or consequential loss or damage of any kind arising out of the performance or breach of the TC, even if Elsevier has been advised of the possibility of such loss or damage. The Client’s only remedy for loss or damage shall be limited to the repayment of the fee paid to Elsevier for the defective or non-conforming Product or Service.

All charges shall be paid in full by the Client, and no set-off, counterclaim, discount, or deduction shall be made on any payment due to Elsevier. All payments are due on receipt by Elsevier. Any payments received prior to the due date shall be credited to the Client’s account in order of the date received. No payment shall be considered as received until Elsevier has acknowledged receipt of such payment. All payments shall be made in US dollars unless otherwise agreed in writing between Elsevier and the Client. All payments shall be made by credit card, bank transfer, or by other means mutually agreed upon by Elsevier and the Client.
